The condition of our schools for the past year has been such as to warrant us in saying that they have seldom been equalled. There has been but few if any complaints from parents, and we are happy to say that they have generally sustained and encouraged the teachers. On the other hand the teachers have been devoted to their work, and have labored faithfully to excel, and we think commendable progress has been made by the pupils.

The moral element in teaching should not be overlooked. Section 10, Chapter 38, of the General Statutes, makes it the duty of all instructors of youth to exert their best endeavors to impress on the minds of children and youth committed to their care and instruction, the principles of piety and justice, and a sacred regard for truth, love of country, humanity and universal benevolence, sobriety, industry and frugality, chastity, moderation and temperance, and those other virtues which are the ornament of human society. From this statute passed in 1789 it will be seen that the fathers gave great prominence to the moral element in education. In obedience to their convictions they required the youth who should resort to the schools to be early and constantly taught to have a sacred regard for the truth, a love of country and of man; to practice all the virtues that contribute to the perfection of individual character. The necessity of moral training makes the teaching of morals obligatory upon all who have anything to do with forming the character of the young. The means to be used are good examples. Whatever the teacher would have his pupils become in so far as moral character is concerned, he must be himself. Even young pupils are skillful in detecting the motives that control the teacher in the management of his school. Truthfulness or the want of it is discerned in the records that are kept of attendance, of recitation and of deportment.

Young pupils are inclined to consider their teachers to be models worthy of unlimited imitation. This relation is most favorable for producing those early impressions that are never effaced, and that give direction to future conduct and character to future life.

The town has very generously contributed toward furnishing her children with new houses in which to pursue their studies. The new house erected the past year at Perry's Hill is a neat and convenient structure, and well furnished with modern appliances, for the purposes of school work. The blackboards are in excellent condition; the smooth hard finish applied to the plastering by Luke Kilcone, and the slating by J. B. Hazzard, both of New Bedford. The building is situated on an elevated and commanding eminence, surrounded with ample play grounds. The school has been taught during the fall and winter terms by Miss Clara B. Springer, who has merited the approval of parents and committee. Unfortunately the school was interrupted during the fall term by the sickness of the teacher, and the winter term was stopped at the end of thirteen weeks by the prevalence of diphtheria, the attendance having been reduced from thirty-eight to nine. It will be but justice to the district that the Spring term commence early in April.

The other houses which have been recently built have been well cared for, and no scholar has evinced a disposition to mutilate or in any way to intentionally injure the building or furniture, and in every case, where by accident a pane of glass has been broken, the offending party has immediately repaired the damage. The house at Long Plain is suffering from a leakage about the chimneys, which is sadly defacing the upper room, and begins to show its effects in the lower. Some one should be instructed to abate the nuisance at once, or further expense may be incurred. The school has been in charge of Mr. Charles L. Russell, the past winter.

The town will be asked to build a house, or repair the structure at the north-west part of the town, known by the very significant cognomen of the (Bog). The locality seems to be as faulty as the house, being as its name would indicate, a marshy bog. It is believed that a more elevated and healthy lot can be obtained at a small cost, and the expense of moving the building might not exceed twenty-five dollars. The house is small and low in the walls, would have to be newly plastered and resealed. We therefore hope that the prayer of the petitioners will be favorably considered, and that equal privileges and facilities will be offered to the youth of our town irrespective of locality.
